HumasUPNVJ - Wednesday (28/04/21) the implementation of the Computer Based Writing Examination (UTBK) at UPN Veteran Jakarta (UPNVJ) entered its third day. Various stories emerged from the UTBK participants.

One of the participants, Anggriani (19) came to the test site with her mother and met the UTBK officer crying because all the files she was carrying had fallen unnoticed.

"Earlier, when I arrived at the Transjakarta bus stop, my child left first with an online motorcycle taxi because he was afraid of being late and brought a file containing the original certificate, ID card and exam card and other exam documents put together. When I arrived in front of the campus, my child realized that the contents of the folder were gone. I don't know what to do, I've searched all the way and can't find it, my child really wants to take the exam," said his mother, Indracahyani (53) recounting the chronology of events while crying in front of the UPNVJ Public Relations officer.

Without thinking long the Public Relations officer reported this incident and helped provide another solution so that Anggriani could still take the exam.

However, not long after that a young man came to give a file to an information officer he met not far from the campus location which turned out to be a document file belonging to Anggriani. Seeing the returned files, Anggriani and her mother were moved because they could be sure they could take the UTBK exam.

When asked further, Anggriani and her mother live in Teluknaga, Tangerang, which is approximately 55 km away and takes 2 hours to travel by public transportation to UPN Veteran Jakarta, Pondok Labu Campus.

This struggle is not easy for Anggriani to do with the aim of being able to participate and fight in UTBK 2021 which is the hope and desire of her and her parents, the struggle she is doing to be able to study at the campus she coveted.

Anggriani is one of the thousands of UTBK fighters whose story can be told, hopefully with this story of struggle it can rekindle the enthusiasm of the UTBK participants to remain optimistic and give maximum effort to achieve the coveted desire to study on campus.
